The American Institutes for Research (AIR) is working with Pittsburgh Public Schools (PPS) to conduct a formative evaluation of Community Schools within five designed district schools. There are four components of the evaluation:

- An evaluation of Community Schools implementation
- The development of a continuous improvement process
- The refinement of the Community Schools Needs Assessment
- An evaluation of family and student outcomes

AIR has 10 years of evaluation experience with Community Schools within the City of Chicago and New York.
Community Schools Next Steps

• Provide Community School sites with follow-up questions based on the Needs Assessment results:
  • Do current services and/or partner agencies align with Need Assessment results?
  • What services and/or agencies will be pursued based on the results of the Needs Assessments?
  • What are the highest need areas based on the Needs Assessment results?

• Continued implementation of Standard Operating Procedures

• Development of Community Schools Building Usage Plans
