Guidance for language provision in groups 1 and 2

Purpose of this document

This document is primarily intended to assist administrators and teachers in schools to understand the language courses on offer from 2011, when the structure of groups 1 and 2 of the IB Diploma Programme will change. It is also anticipated that this document will be of use to other interested parties—including universities, governments, parents and students—who need an overview of IB language courses for students aged 16–19, together with an understanding of how the courses are structured and the languages in which they are offered.

The courses and arrangements described in this document will be valid for teaching from 2011 (first examinations 2013) for the life of the curriculum review cycle.

The document provides:

- an overview of group 1 and 2 changes
- requirements and rationale for the new structure
- group 1 course descriptions, outline of syllabuses and assessment, and a list of languages offered for the revised courses
- criteria for the award of a bilingual diploma
- group 2 course descriptions, outline of syllabuses and assessment, and a list of languages offered for the revised courses
- guidance for the placement of students in language courses
- an illustration of how IB language courses relate to internationally recognized language levels.

Group 2 classical languages	Latin (SL/HL) Classical Greek (SL/HL)	Latin (SL/HL) Classical Greek (SL/HL)

Requirements

Students are required to select at least one language from group 1. They are also required to select a different second language from either group 1 or group 2. Students also have the option of studying a third language (from either group) as an elective instead of a group 6 subject.

Rationale for group 1

Group 1 courses are designed to support future academic study by developing high levels of language competence and communication skills as well as social, aesthetic and cultural literacy. Literature plays a central role in the courses, which aim to support lifelong learning through engaging students as actively as possible with the texts they study.

Each course highlights a different perspective in the study of texts.

- In language A: literature the focus is directed towards developing an understanding of the techniques involved in literary criticism and promoting the ability to form independent literary judgments.
- Language A: language and literature looks more openly at the method of inquiry embodied in critical literacy and is directed towards understanding the constructed nature of meanings generated by language and the web of relationships they share with the social world. In addition, language A: language and literature allows the exploration of a wide variety of non-literary texts.
- Literature and performance enables students to combine literary analysis with practical experience of the investigation of the role of performance in understanding literature.

Group 1 courses are suitable for students who have experience of using the language in an academic context. It is recognized that students have language backgrounds that vary significantly. There are some students for whom the target language is their only proficient language, whereas other students have complex language profiles and are competent in more than one language. One path to a bilingual diploma is to take two group 1 courses, each in a different language (in any combination). Special-request language A and school supported self-taught options remain available in language A: literature. By providing these options, group 1 supports additive bilingualism through the support and development of the student's mother tongue.

Group 2 courses exist to provide students with the opportunity to acquire or develop an additional language (or languages) and to promote an understanding of other cultures through the study of language.

- Language ab initio and language B are language acquisition courses designed to provide students with the necessary skills and intercultural competence that will enable them to communicate successfully in an environment where the language studied is spoken. The ab initio course is designed for students who have little or no experience of the language. Language B is intended for students with prior learning of the language.
- Students can also opt to study a classical language course in Latin or Classical Greek.

Group 1

Language A: Literature (SL/HL)

The language A1 course has been renamed language A: literature. It will continue to be the course that supports mother-tongue entitlement in the IB.

Course description

Language A: literature develops understanding of the techniques involved in literary criticism and promotes the ability to form independent literary judgments.

It is a flexible course that allows teachers to choose literary works from prescribed book lists and to construct a course that suits the particular needs and interests of their students.

Students can take language A: literature at SL as a school supported self-taught option.

Schools may make a special request for an examination to be set for students whose mother tongue is not represented on the list of languages offered.

Language A: Language and literature (SL/HL)

Language A: language and literature is a new course, introduced into group 1 to provide greater choice and with a particular focus on developing an understanding of the constructed nature of meanings generated by language. Two parts of the course relate to the study of language and two to the study of literature.

Course description

The language A: language and literature course develops skills of textual analysis. A study of the formal structures of a text is combined with an exploration of the way the use of formal elements and our understanding of their meaning is affected by reading practices that are culturally defined.

The course is flexible. Teachers have the opportunity to construct it to reflect the interests and concerns relevant to their students.

Syllabus and assessment

Note: Some literary works are chosen from the language A prescribed book lists and the prescribed list of works in translation.

Literature and performance (SL)

Literature and performance is a new transdisciplinary subject. Transdisciplinary subjects fully meet the aims of two subject groups, in this case group 1 and group 6.

Course description

The course is a synthesis of literature and theatre, incorporating the essential elements of literature and performance and exploring the relationship between the two.

At the heart of the course is an interaction between a conventional literary emphasis on close reading, critical writing and discussion and the practical, aesthetic and symbolic elements of performance.

Syllabus and assessment

Literature and performance pursues an integrated approach to the detailed critical study of texts, the exploration of their performance potential and their realization in performance.

The course is constructed around three strands.

- Literary analysis and interpretation
- Explorations of the performance potential of texts
- Realization of text in performance

Students are required to study a minimum of four literary texts.

External assessment	SL
Paper 1 Prose and performance essay	1 hour 30 minutes

Award of a bilingual diploma

From (first examinations) 2013 the award of a bilingual diploma will be for either:

1. completion of two languages selected from group 1 with the award of a grade 3 or higher in both
2. completion of one of the subjects from group 3 or group 4 in a language that is not the same as the student's nominated group 1 language. The student must attain a grade 3 or higher in both the group 1 language and the subject from group 3 or 4.

Group 2

Language B (SL/HL)

Course description

Language B SL and HL are language acquisition courses for students with some background in the target language. While learning this additional language, students also explore the culture(s) connected to it.

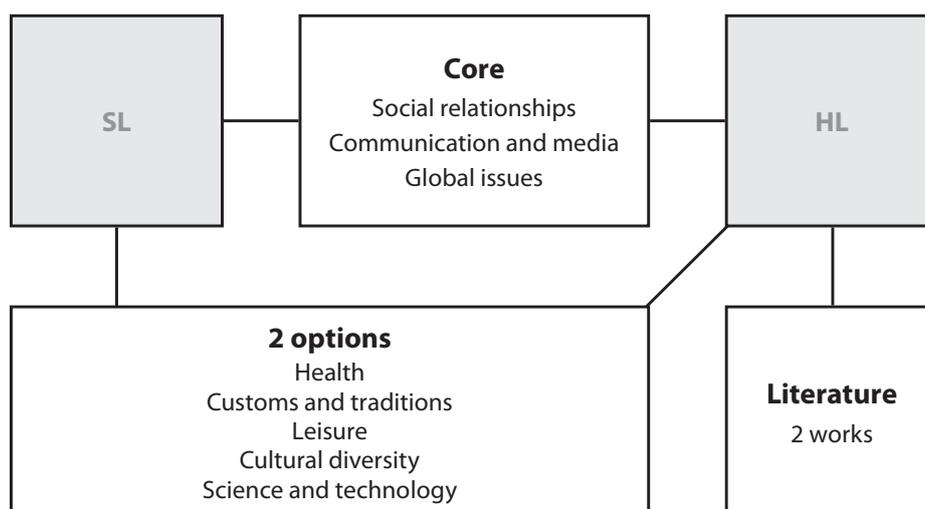

Standard and higher levels are differentiated by the recommended teaching hours, the depth of syllabus coverage, the study of literature at HL, the level of difficulty and the demands of assessment and the assessment criteria.

The range of purposes and situations for which and in which the language is used in the language B courses extends well beyond those at ab initio.

Syllabus and assessment

The core, which is common to both SL and HL, consists of three topics and is a required area of study. In addition, teachers select two options from a choice of five.

At HL, two works of literature are studied.

Language ab initio (SL)

Course description

The language ab initio course is a language acquisition course for students with little or no experience of the language.

It is organized around three themes.

- Individual and society
- Leisure and work
- Urban and rural environment

Each theme has a list of topics that provide the students with opportunities to practise and explore the language as well as to develop intercultural competence.

Through the development of receptive, productive and interactive skills, students acquire the ability to respond and interact appropriately in a defined range of everyday situations. Each language ab initio has a language-specific syllabus that is used in conjunction with the guide.

Classical languages

The classical languages courses introduce students to the languages, literatures and cultures of ancient Greece and Rome. The two languages offered are Latin and Classical Greek.

The courses involve the study of texts in the original language, and linguistic skills lie at the heart of the courses.

Through the study of classical languages in their cultural context, students develop an understanding that culture and language shape one another.

Note: The syllabus is the same for Latin and Classical Greek.

Placement of students in language courses

The following table is provided to assist teachers in placing students in an appropriate language course. Each course is described through statements that explain the learning outcomes that students who complete the course with a grade 4 or above will be able to achieve by the end of the course.

Teachers and Diploma Programme coordinators should ensure that, as far as possible, students are following the course that is most suited to their needs and that will provide them with an appropriate academic challenge.
